

Dear Community,

Due to the recent changes mandated by the California Association of Realtors (CDAR), all open houses have been suspended until further notice. That said, let it be known that buyers are still actively searching the inventory of homes, via the MLS, Zillow, etc. You may not currently see realtor caravans, open houses, or agents showing homes, but buyer-prospects remain vigilant in their search for the right home. In fact, with the Governor's "stay at home" order, many potential buyers are "surfing" the web for homes even more than the pre-virus world.

With the 21st century bringing so many advances in technology, the real estate business has no shortage of avenues available to buyers, via virtual tours, real estate websites, etc., so rest assured your home is not sitting idle and buyers are viewing potential properties.
